The law

- ❖ Mental health and physical health are equally important.
- ❖ Mental health, like physical health, can fluctuate on a spectrum from good to poor.
- ❖ Mental health problems can therefore affect any of us irrespective of age, personality or background.
- ❖ They can appear because of experiences in both our personal and working lives – or they can just happen. One in four people will experience a mental health problem in any given year.
- ❖ Employees may be affected directly or indirectly, if partners, dependants or other family members have mental health problems, which in turn impact on the employee's own health.
- ❖ People can also be affected by friends' and fellow employees' experiences.
- ❖ Mental health problems can affect the way people think, feel or behave.

Employers have a 'duty of care'. This means they must do all they reasonably can to support their employees' health, safety, and wellbeing.

This includes:

- making sure the working environment is safe
- protecting staff from discrimination
- carrying out risk assessments

If staff feel they can talk openly about mental health, problems are less likely to build up.

This could lead to:

- less time off for a mental health issue
- improved morale in the workplace
- Increased productivity
